EU support to news media: a state-of-play

March 2022

In short:

The European Union supports the news media sector primarily through:

- The ‘Multimedia Actions’ line to fund independent news media coverage of EU affairs.
- Pilot projects and preparatory actions proposed from one year to another by the European Parliament, on a variety of topics.
- And more recently, actions under its Creative Europe programme to support media pluralism and freedom, media collaborations and media literacy.

While additional investment and financing opportunities are being developed, demand exceeds the available budgets (€41 million in 2021).

I- From a few strands of actions...

Mindful of the contribution of professional journalism to democracy, the European Commission has historically funded the news media sector and editorial activities through two channels:

First, a Multimedia Actions line, which has focused on funding independent news media coverage of EU affairs (projects such as a radio network, data-driven networks, Euronews or the European newsroom). This yearly budget amounts to around €20 million per year.

...and second, pilot projects and preparatory actions implemented on the basis of proposals of the European Parliament. These are decided from one year to another and may consist e.g. of research or projects around media freedom, media pluralism or media literacy. Such support amounted to €12 million in 2021.
II- ...to a more holistic approach

As the pandemic severely affected the news media sector, and in the face of the increasing challenges posed by disinformation and revenues shifts, the European Commission launched the ‘NEWS initiative’ in December 2020, as part of a wider plan to help the audiovisual and media sectors recover.

The ‘NEWS’ initiative is bringing several funding instruments under a common banner and consists of the following steps:

More regular dialogues with representatives of the European news media industry in order to understand existing needs and help organisations thrive and fulfill their role in our democracies. Two such European News Media Forums took place in 2021, on the safety of journalists and on industrial transformation.

Greater access to finance under InvestEU, the EU’s investment programme. The Cultural and Creative Sectors’ Guarantee Facility, which has already helped 6000 organisations in 19 EU Member States, will operate under InvestEU. The Commission will also create an equity pilot to co-invest in news media with philanthropists, foundations, and private partners. Both initiatives will be complemented by training services designed to increase investors’ knowledge of the news media market.

Grants for media collaborations. Yearly calls for proposals under the Creative Europe Programme are for example supporting partnerships between media organisations that wish to share good businesses practices or carry out joint journalistic projects. The first seven ‘Journalism Partnerships’ will start in early 2022.

Next to these ‘Journalism Partnerships’ grants, the Creative Europe programme 2021-2027 includes for the first time actions to support media pluralism, freedom and literacy.

Altogether, EU support to the news media sector under the Creative Europe programme represents 3% of the total envelope for 2021-2027. First available results suggest that the funding needs of the sector exceed the available resources, while the Creative Europe programmed budget for the years 2023 to 2027 will be lower than for 2022.

News media organisations are eligible under calls in other programmes (e.g. Horizon Europe), although such calls do not specifically target news media.
